Confederates win battle at GCC's Medina Campus

Re-enactors will engage in mock battle again Sunday

Jay Black of Batavia invited Paul Harbaugh from Erie, Pa. Harbaugh was a lieutenant for the day on the Confederate side of the battle.

"I've been interested in the Civil War since I was 6 years old," Harbaugh said. In grade school, he recalls the teacher telling the other students that any questions they had about the Civil War should be directed to Harbaugh, their fellow classmate.

Before the battle began, General Grant, portrayed by Ed Brodbeck of Cheektowaga, said that he was uncertain of how the battle for the day would go, but was very hopeful the Union would win the day's fight.

"I don't know the scenario yet. One day the rebel forces will win, one day the Union forces will win."

He said this keeps it interesting for spectators to not know what type of battle they are about to witness and not know the result ahead of time.

By Sue Cook, staff reporter Posted 28 April 2014

MEDINA - The Genesee Community College campus in Medina roared with cannon fire and gunshots as the Civil War re-enactors took to the battlefield this afternoon. The two sides of the battle included soldiers from the Confederacy and the Union taking up arms in a fight over state rights.

Many of the soldiers were from out of the area, and were invited to participate by locals. All those participating wore period correct uniforms.

General Grant (center in front of flag) was the first Lieutenant General since George Washington. The rank of a three-star general was revised by Lincoln and Congress.

In the mock battle, some of the soldiers acted as if they were wounded. Many men fell to the ground screaming, while others simply dropped on the spot. The young men called out to be heard for help, but ultimately were unable to survive the battle.

The Union soldiers wore blue. The Confederates had gray uniforms near the start of the war, but when Union forces cut off their supplies from English ships, they had to use what was available to them. Many of the uniforms are brown because women making the uniforms would use dyes made from tree barks, and would end up with variations.

When asked how they know if they are supposed to be injured in the battle, Drake said, "The commander says 'We gotta take some hits.' Also, if you're out of powder, or caps or just tired."
